NOT A REVOLUTIONIST. It is curious to notice how the democrats at the East are divided in their judgment concern-ing Tilden. Borabeimer and Hawitt were grievously disappointed in his determination to acquiesce in the decision of the electoral com-mission. mission; other ilemotrate praise him for what they are pleased to term his patriothim. There was no patriotism about it. Both parties in s consented to the extra constitutions estilement, simply because the common sense of the nation had to choose between an extra-con-strational settlement and another civil war. Nobody wanted a civil war; neither North ; neither democrats nor republican-Every candid man admitted that within the con stitution there was no clear mode of settlement. Edmunds, Conkling and a number of republicans do not agree with Morlon, Sherman, Blaine and Farm, who shitments. Ferry, who claimed for the president of the senthe something more than ministerial powers claimed for him the right not only to count but to construe as well as to declare the count. There were candid men on either side that did ony that the elections at the South were 50 frightfully disfigured by blood and Land or right from might and say who was elected. In this state of confusion of opinion concerning the elections and the defective constitutional machinery for settlement, which remains the without correction, it was perfectly clear that whithout correction, it was perfectly clear that both parties must consent to an extra-constitu-tional tribunal, since the inadequate settlement within the constitution satisfied nobody and was open to overthrow through the passions of the people. Under these circumstances the leaders of both parties in congress acted with patriotwhich says the salvation of the peace of a great nation, that had so recently ceased to sweat blood in a violent struggle of civil war, was of more consequence than the possession of the presidency by either party. Senator arman, the ablest and purest mac in the democracy, rose to this level of patrictism; so did Conkling and other republican statesmen, an out of this patriotic agreement to save the state from civil war came the electoral commission tribunal. Mr. Tilden could not have prevented its creation, and he did not attempt to resist its conclusion, because he dared not, even if he had desired to defy it. Grant was president, and he fairly warned the leaders of both parties that whatever decision the commission reached he would exhaust his power as execu live to establish it. If it was Titlen he would see that he was inaugurated, in face of any con-spiracy of republican bothcads to defeat it, and if it was Hayes he would act with equal vigor. the patriotism of leading men of bott parties that created that electoral commission: it was the patriotism of leading men of both par givic nower to enforce the conclusion of this extra-constitutional tribunal, that preserved the peace of the nation and planted Hayes immora-bly in his seat. It was not the to the presence of patriotism in Thien or the absence of it. He did not attempt to resist the enforcement of the commission's conclusion, because he knew would be fruitless, and furthermore because he was inadequate, through his physical health, to play the part of a purpassions, neckless revolutionist leader. Most health, the play the part of a purpassions, neckless revolutionist leader. tionist leader. Had he been a man of the phys ically robust quality and audocity of B in Batter he might have been complet to try his hand and make frouble, but Titlen was a purely intellect-ual man; he was a critic, a thinker; a manager, negotiator, a lawyer who would have dared anything in thought within the law, but whether he felt himself right or wrong he was not the man to rust to arms without the forms of law to ride his sea of troubles. Slekty men, of feeble constitution, who have to employ a dector duty to blow their dickering flame of life into a blaze, who are half paralyzed and spenk in whispers saidom if ever inspire revolutions. Pugnacity is seldom the brother of paralysis. Tilden could not have resisted if he would, and even it his excess both bare that of about the inhis cause had been that of clear right over im moral might be would not have taken an appeal to the people for revolution, because he wasn't physically or mentally built that way. He had nothing to do with the settlement and the popular submission to it. The patriotism of the leaders of both parties settled It without any consideration of his personal interests whatever, and the patriotism of both parties enforced the destination. decision of the electoral commission without a thought or care whether Tilden liked it of not: promised submission or threatened resistance. Tilden, as a party leader, did not cummit congress to this plan of breaking through constitutional darkness and storm to extra-constitutional calm and peace, and Tilden's patriotlem or the want of it had nothing to do with the ratification of its results. The pa-triotism and conservative common sense of both parties saved the nation, without consulting Tilden and his assent or dissent: his submission or his revolutionary resistance were absolutely powerless to alled the acceptance of the cancip-sion of the commission and its enforcement by the people. Tilden, very likely, did not want to the people. Titlen, very likely, did not want to do anything, but he could that educe anything had he desired, to contress sorted the matter without his countyance or control and the people rathied it without not county and the people rathied it without not county and the people rathied it without not county a bart to whether Titlen said revolution or subtracted. People and different decision as to clearload timescentral tribunal would have been reached if the South had not known that whatever great graduling titlen had he was not a man of the pagentians of sheep had the south and he was not a man of the pagentians and the states the comparison of sheep had the people in the states that the most discouraging returns of sheep had from any cook. He was formulated with the pen, within the law, but whether without the law he was not a man to lift his sweri belief to make it we or break law. Titlen's stom should be used in the southern states train to be type county at the far West from a to smake it we or break law. Titlen's stom should in the southern states train to be type county. cock. He was forminable with the pen, within the law, but whether within or without the law he was but a num to life the sweet boddy to make law or brenk law. The Stor, with more real than discretion, further argues that Tox "Shoutstay's statement of a simple historical fact is an implied lisparagement of other patriotic lineage. It the Star will stop a moment for candid obsideration it will see that it is in error as to the question of historical fact and natural in its inference. The Star is a democratic paper. In a resemble of the observation of the star is a democratic paper. recent public address of Henry C. Robinson, the most eminent democratic lawyer of connect-cut, Grant, Lyon and Sadgwick are described as of Parilan stock, that is in the sense of New Parilan Manager. as of Puritan stock, that is in the sense of New England lineage, Grant himself is our author-ity. He says in the very first chapter of his memoirs, which everylody but the editor of the Star has read, that be was descended from Mat-thew Grant: that his ancestors fought in the New England contingent of the old French war before the revolution; and in the continental AREX during the resolution, can exhibit arms during the revolution; and while we are willing ordinarily to defer to the Size in mat-ters of American history, we modestly submit that Grant probably knew as much about his ancestors as the Star possibly can know. far as Puritan stock is concerned, it is like any other stock; it may stand for glory or for shame. Aaron Burr, Benedict Arnold, Brigham Vonng, Heber Kimball, Joseph Smith and John H. Noyes, the One da communist, were of New England origin and presumably of Purstan stock. Our own Sheridan is of frish stock, and so were the assassins of Burke and Cavendish.

Channey Depew and Hugh Legare were of Huguenot slock, and so was traiteau, the marderer of Garfield. Jackson, the defender of the Union and the constitution, was of Scotch-Irish stock, and so was Calhoun, the evangelist of se in and the champion of multification Washington, the founder of the republic, was of first-clase Tirginia stock, and so was Lee, who came so near destroying Washington's work. Crispus Attucks, shot to death in the Boston riot by the soldiers of King George, was a negro, and so was the murderer Chastine Cox;

Thomas Start King, who helped keep California in the Union, was of Phritan stock, while E. D. Baker, another eloquent champton of the Union on the Pacific coast, was of English stock, born in London. Good stock produces sometimes very strange fruit, some good and some bid, even on the Pacific coast, and if the Start is not more candid and fat for the forture we shall susmore candid and fair for the future we shall su pect that some "mean Yank has been put in charge of its columns.

OCE PARLIAMENTARY SYSTEM.

Mr. folly, a member of the Canadian parliament, in a recent lecture, declared that the Canadian system of government, which is sub-stantially a duplicate of the Entitel system, hav-ing an elected senate instead of a house of lords, governor-general instead of the queen, is politically superior to that of the United States. The British system is based on ministerial responeitility, and is so captivating to some Americans that democratic Senator Pendleton once proposed to give members of the cabinet seats on the floor of congress with a voice in debate, but no rote. The natural argument against the wisdom of this change is as follows: The theory of the English constitution is that the cabinet must be in harmony with the commons. The cabinet is but the executive of the commons. mons. The English cabinet must, therefore, he in political accord with its creator or resign, and as a matter of fact, the members of the cabin have, as a rule, been members of the commons. Under these relations, the life of the English cabinet ceases when parliamentary support fails. But under our written constitution executive and legislative branches of government are made distinctly independent of each other, instead of the identity of the cabinet and commons. Under our constitution we may have an executive and cabinet not in political accord-With congress, and we have had two hor congress with equal lawmaking powers and responsibilities, but in utter political hostility. Was it practicable to substitute, by this change, the British system of government for our own the senate would be reduced to the level of the English house of lords. If we gave cabinet officers a voice in debate without a vote, we would only intensity the natural jealousy be-tween the executive and congress, for the fidelity and impartiality of an executive officer who had wurmly opposed a law in debate would be naturally disputed or impeached. No practical advantage could result, for at present cabinet officers have the right of speech before committees and the right of written communication to either house. We do not see why all states might not, with advantage, adopt the provision of the Nebraska constitution, recited in our dispalches resterday morning;
"That at a general election immediately preceding the expiration of a term of a United States sendor from this state the electors shall, by ballot, express their preference for some person for the office of United States senator."

Of course the implication of this provision is that the instant.

that the legislature would be bound by the popular preference expressed at the polis, but thus plan preference expressed at the polls, but thus far this provision has been a dead letter because no aspirant has dured sek for an expression of no aspirant has dared ask for an expression of preference. The provision is worth having in every constitution, so that if the people cared t express a preference, their legislature could not pretend that it had not been instructed.

THE NUMBER OF SHEEP

The census of 1850 placed the number of sheep in the country at 35,192,000. In 1835 the number of sheep reported to the agricultural bureau was 50,360,215, atthough there had been a decline in the Eastern states. Texas had increased from 2,411,000 to 7,585,000, having thus more than trebled its flocks in five years. But the severe winter of 1855 carried off 15 per cent of the Texas sheep. New Mexico in 1883 had 2488,000; in 1885 it had 5,110,000, of which it had only 6 per cent. Gregor also had increased from 1,688,000 to 2,519,000, of which it lost 8 per cent. California also increased, and has

The Republican remarks:

L'ennsylvania shows the most striking decrease, but all the central Western states have also declined except hitchigan. The agricultural betreut reported a loss of nearly 4,000,000 from the severity of the winter and disease in 1885, and states the total number in April, 1886, at 4822,000, a net loss or over 2,000,000 from 1885. The loss last winter is reported at 3,310-000 or an average of 1 per cent. The above flutness justify the concussion that there has been a fine decrease.

The victima who were passaulty at-tending to their own business were driven from their houses and employments by a gang of relians. The motive was precisely that of the pirate and rubber. The chinese, 87 in number, were emissived in frail craft and sent to Wran-gel where there is muthing but them to do and no means of getting away, and where they must state to death if they are not rescued. It is the duty of the national government to protect these people who are on American sell by the express authority of an international treaty. A comboat court to be sent to Alaska with orders to return the outraged Chinese to their homes and to protect them in their rights. If this be not done the Chinese government will be justified in a demand for reparation or even by

We are told that there is some question about the re-establishment of the rope works de-stroyed by fire a few days since. It is not because the business will not pay, but owing to the fact that the stockholders are engaged in other kinds of business and do not care to be bothered with a "side issue." We hope sin-cere's that they will take a broader view of the matter and consider it as a public as well as a private interest. It has been demonstrated that rope making will pay here, and in paying em-ploy a large number of workmen and keep a considerable amount of money in the country. considerable amount of money in the country. It is said that no interest in the state has been better protected than that of the rope factory during the long period of hard times. For more than three years not a coil of tope has been imported into thregon and Washington. It would be a pity indeed to lose an interest so well established and so innocriant. well established and so important

The Chinese outrage in Alaska came under the notice of Chief Justice Waite and ex-Gov. Headly of Ohia, and we are assured that these gentlemen will present the case to the government and orga prompt action for the protection of the evicted Chinese in their rights.

OHILDREN AS EDUCATORS.

The train of reflection which the reader of this column will follow was started by two illus-trations used by a well-known writer in an artitrations used by a well-known writer in an arti-cle on the training of parents and children. The first of these represents a perf young miss of the modern school, saying. "th, dear I am afraid I shall near be able to bring up mother proper is." The second is the speech of a tyaker to one shout to adopt a child. "My friend, I know not how far thou wilt succeed in educating her, but I am quite certain she will educate thee."

These two observations spring from widely erent feelings on the part of each obs which teenings on the part of each observer, but in the two there is much food for thought While the old assume as is their right the guidance of the youth of their families into proper channels, chucating them in the way that they st ould go, youth unconsciously educates age, teaches it and leads it in paths of which it had not thought.

There is much in childhood to charm | There There is much in childhood to charm. There is the inquiring mind of the labe, growing and expanding and taking cognizance of its surroundings, drinking in wondering innocease in the strange sights and sounds it sees from day to day, showing the fear which must be soothed at strange things that affright it, and going into creaticles of delight over little nothings which please it. Who is not stirred to depths of tender intends the one sight, and who does in expand in sympathy with the other.

The scriptures speak of faith which can move as that of a little child The one we concerve of as grand and subline we can in a measure understand it, for the inited and inclination of men and woman naturally sour to that which is grand rather than to that which is simple. The faith of little children must be seen to be under stood, and when seen, who can conceive of any thing more beautiful? Chaging, trusting with not the shadow of doubt, it needes in the bosom of its parent, who is the Alpha and it diega of all its little shought—its everything. Linguige is to poor to express what its parent is out, for its whole little being is absorbed into the suit and life of the other.

Thus the little child educates and humanizes Thus the little child educates and humanizes, and the mind that otherwise would be abso bed in things sorded and of the earth earthy, is fear third and combined by contact with its trusting and confiding nature. The spectacle of associate dependents and confiding loss presented has a tendency to take the edge from anger and self islanes, and develop feelings of tondenness and pentieness until they become the ruling characteristics of one's nature.

The expanding and in pairing mind of child The expanding and in puring mind of child bood can teach much to the person who is foolish permitting worldly dross to crowd out better things. The "What is money after all." addressed by little Paul Bomley to his auntitious father might have seried to divoce that gentleman to some extent from those large business schemes to which his ambition prompted him, and might have drawn him into the cheerful warmth of the humanizing influences of home love, but though the stern nature was strongly disturbed by the questrooting of the little dreamer, habit had so encrusted it that the contingration of passion had to do its devastating work before the soothing power of love could make treaff eit. The questionings of childhood suggest a wis-

The questionings of childhood suggest a wisdom begond the questioner's years, and have their educating influence on those not too much occupied with "business" to be bothered thereby The soul of the little one is hungry for knowl edge as to the "wbp" and the "how" of things, and the inquestive intile mind and questioning in the tongue keep busy any one who will pay attention, while like thence suggested and the thoughts catled up have in them a world of sug gestion as to the proper direction of these montal forces with which humanity has been endowed by nature. The educating initioeness of childhood cannot be overestimated. Contemptation of the growth of the roung intelligence alone must refresh and of the found intelligence alone must refresh and requeents the mind freed out by the whirt of business, while the effort to satisfy the inquiries must be a relapsation from the constant contemplation of dollars and cents, weights and measures, and things of that kind, which must reinvigorate and lend elasticity to the brain, and watching the growth of the young nature and intelligence has to it much that is strange, from which much can be learned if one will only learn it.

"I langy it is all in this contignity. If Englishmen were born in Irishmal thank they would be just the same." Beyond this the figure of Wolfe appears, in a rather obscure corner—the Irishman who wrote. Not a drum was beard, nor a funeral noise." His grave is near Cork. Wellingfour's statue is found in a dozen different places, but the grant Wellingfou memorial at Pheenix park, 20s. feet bigb, overshadows everything. Hobert Emmet, too, is far frum forgotten. I dienest said. "Poor Emmet," but I take it back, for no matter what his secrifice, no one needs that sympathy who is held as warmly and proudly as Emmed in the hearts of his countrymen. He is the Irish daring still. Just turn down yonder St. Thomas street and see the last remnant of a low brick building, saily dillaydised, but a shrine where many a prayer is offered still, and many a smouldering fire of rebellion burns brighter and many a heart beats faster, for it marks the spot where Emmet was imprisoned and where he was hanged. Nor was he the first or the last who suffered there for "Wearing of the Greon." Then come up Sackville street and over the half to the Gisnevin cemetry. It is inclosed by a high stone wall all ivy grown, and at each corner is a great watch tower, covered with try at the gate we puss the grave of duthorn, O Connell s colleague in purlament then the timb of Curran, modeled after the sarcophagus of Scipio Barhatius. The Serah Craig disaster occasions a great deal of comment East. The current of opinion seems to right ire that a competent body should exercise au pervision over all vessels carrying passengers, whether steam or sail. The steam inspection service is of great benefit and no doubt is the means of preventing much loss of life. Why a sailer should be allowed to carry any number of passengers without inspection either as to so worthiness staunchiness or life sain ing appliances is unaccountable. By the cas of the 4-rail, seven persons met death. If a there been even an ax on board some could have been thereted from imprisonment in MONDAY Aug 16 able By the oss of the 4-ral, seven persons met death. If d there been even an ax on board some could have been therated from imprisonment in the cabin. The sail service of this country needs off lai supervision and a few accidents of this kin i will compel it. In the merchant marine un derwriters pass upon the seaworthiness of a vessel and competency of its master. A master, however incompetent can secure a ship if underwriters will a sure. A disaster passes without further notice than that by underwriters interested If a master loses a ship he is blackboarded and another loss would probably cause underwriters to refuse insurances and the master would fall to secure another simp. There is no examination no particular experience necessary and no in pury underwriters alone being interested. The loss of a British vessel leads to official inquiry her master is exomerated suspended or has this papers taken from bim and he must begin anew. A new system or rather a system is needed for the American service.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offired to the public for the SAPE, CERTAIN, SPERDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chillsand Fever, we there of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to hear him testimony to the fruth of the assortion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the direct onseresticity followed and coarned out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, how over, prident, and in every case more cortain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller dos for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and cos for a week or two atter the disease has bee obsolved, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any sid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, re-quires catharti medicine, after having taken three or for 'case of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient Use no other
